This year, add a little innovation to your event, whether you're planning a DIY or finding a venue that can help out. Here's a list of innovative manufacturing applications you might see at your wedding reception: a robotic bartender Photo Credit: Kinsey Coyle Most people don't have this in mind when planning a wedding, but your guests will be amazed by a robot bartender that can mix drinks for them and get a creative drink recipe in the process. The droid, which looks like a little drunk robot, is an ingenious invention by Creative Applications, Inc., and the first in a series of "bio-robots" that can help with various hospitality jobs around the world. So the next time you throw a big wedding, feel free to hire that droid to make your guests' cocktails. Photo Credit: Creative Applications, Inc. an all-seeing eye with feedback We're all on the constant hunt for a glimpse of eye contact. With a little creativity and an eye-searing industrial look, you can turn the party into a carnival, turning your guests into a giant game of hide-and-seek. Instead of an open, one-way window to your guests' eyes, make a video wall that turns your attendees into a pixel-like glob, with a bunch of blinking eyes behind.

15.2.3550 [17.03.17] A new release has been uploaded as version 15.2.3500 [17.03.16] A new release has been uploaded as version I'm using Windows 7 x64 Ultimate and I have tried to change to Windows 7 x32 and Windows 7 x64. A: First thing to do would be to download the latest version of DriverPack Solution from the link you provided and run it. It will automatically fix the missing dll error you are having. After the DriverPack Solution runs successfully, you can restart your computer. Thanks. Photo by Stan Honda Earlier this week, we reported on the reason Gorillaz mastermind Damon Albarn said he'd go into the studio to work on a new Gorillaz album. It was because there would be no more festival dates for the band. Without touring, Albarn's plan is to sit down and write. Advertisement The good news? He's writing. And he's talking about his writing methods. In a new interview, Albarn and Mirwais Ahmadzaï, a.k.a. 2D, described their creative process. "I write music in a straight line...I don't really stop or start," Albarn told the U.K.'s Guardian. "When I started out as a producer, I would go in there and work on the basic track - there'd be a drum kit, a bass line and a melodic idea - and then I'd hand it off to other people, and it would probably take me a couple of months to finish it all." He's not new to the music world: "I've done it for years." Lyrically, Albarn said the aim is always the same. "I just try to write something that's truthful." He added, "I'm always thinking 'what would Baz Luhrmann do?' It's like Robert Altman in a way; I've always admired that that kind of freedom, trying to write a film all the time." He says writing for Gorillaz is much more fun and less stressful than his solo album, "Damon Albarn": "The chances of something coming out which is really bad is very high." As for the working title of the new Gorillaz album, Albarn said 6d1f23a050
